

QUICK BIC NEWS

Worst Case Scenario Survival Guide: BIC ed.

So, you're one semester in. And you're freaking out. Even if you're a sophomore, or a junior, and you are starting yet another semester full of classes that nobody else on campus knows the name of...you're freaking out. Well, after reading through this article, you will be completely equipped to face any challenge that BIC throws your way. So, stop sweating. Quit stress-eating. And read yet another thing.

1. You haven't read for a class. What do you do? Sparknotes. Asap. Certainly you won't be able to contribute as much to discussion as the rest (who maybe read Sparknotes a little bit more carefully), but you still have a good shot of acing the quiz questions. Sophomores-for discussion board, piggyback on what the person before you said. ALWAYS go back and read for the tests.
2. You have a test tomorrow and you haven't even started to study. Blackboard power-points. Freshmen, look back over the journals that you have written. TIP: Write on the top of every print-out the main ideas for that particular article/excerpt. It'll help tremendously come test time.

All of these students are members of the BIC. They are all scared out of their minds, and stressed beyond belief. Join the club. And calm down.

3. You have a paper that's due...in four hours. One. Shame on You. Two. We've all been there. Here's the thing: just start to write. And during this process, something will come to you. Just keep going. Don't drink another Red Bull, don't eat 5 cupcakes-- just write! You may end up scrapping everything 30 minutes before, but then the brilliance will flow. It'll work out. Trust me.
4. You realize all the friends you've made are in BIC. That's perfect. They speak your language. They share in your suffering. This is true community. Try to get some back-ups, but embrace the BIC.
5. You don't know which prof to pick for the next semester. They're all great. Talk to upper classmen.

No worries here. Keep calm and carry on.

By: Maggie Emerson, Editor

follow us
@ QuickBIC

join the Facebook
group: QuickBIC :) yup.

upcoming events:

2nd annual BOARD GAME
TOURNAMENT. get excited!!!
8 October 2010. save that date. more details to come.

homecoming tailgate...
details coming SOON.

WTH(eck) is BICLC? answer: BIC Leadership Council

As written in our constitution: "We, the members of BICLC, exist in order to serve our fellow BIC peers and the surrounding Waco community. We strive to host events that will foster a BIC community outside of the classroom, believing that all members of the BIC have something to offer and something to learn."

We plan events. We execute them. We inform you. We are here for you and we want to know you. The BICLC is made up of members from each class who represent their peers in our meetings, offering thoughts and suggestions for making this program as effective and especially as fun as it can be.

Throughout the year, we will plan different events to involve all in the BIC community in order that we may grow closer and learn from each other. Sometimes, what we see in each other in the classroom is annoying. At these events, you will get the chance to talk more about things non-class related, and really get to know the individuals around you!

We truly desire to be one BIC happy family. Join us as we make this a reality!

save the date. november 18, 2010.

entertainment
delicious food
semi-formal FAB one BIC
happy
family.

faculty appreciation banquet is coming!!!

*garrett's
giggles*

keep checking
here to see
the most riBICulous
things!

THIS IS AN INTERDISCIPLINARY PROGRAM
IN WHICH PHYSICS STUDENTS TRY TO HIT
PSYCHOLOGY STUDENTS WITH PENDULUMS.

<http://www.explainxkcd.com/2010/06/18/interdisciplinary/>
MY PROFESSORS HAD AN ONGOING COMPETITION
TO GET THE WEIRDEST THING TAKEN SERIOUSLY
UNDER THE LABEL "INTERDISCIPLINARY PROGRAM,"

professor doppelganger:

Timothy
Heckenlively

as...
Tom Green?

pun of the month: riBICulous. example: girl, the back of your head is riBICulous; see you in class!