Monday Healthy Tip
Breast cancer is the second most common type of cancer diagnosed in American women. Although it's more rare, men can develop breast cancer, too. Fortunately, eating a healthy and balanced diet (especially high in fruits and vegetables), exercising regularly, maintaining a healthy weight, not smoking, and limiting alcohol consumption may all lower your risk of developing breast cancer. This week, evaluate your current breast cancer prevention practices and check to see when your next screening should be. For additional information, visit www.baylor.edu/wellness.
