Software

Tab Room on the Mac (Computer software program for the scheduling, operation, and tabulation of the debate tournament); the program includes 56 interactive programs totaling 80,000 lines of code. TRM is downloadable from the Internet at Debate Central (U. of Vermont) and at my own web page. Written in FutureBasic and compiled into machine code.

Tab Room on the PC (Computer software program for the scheduling, operation, and tabulation of the debate tournament); the above described scheduling program was written and distributed for PCs, funded by a grant from the American Forensic Association. Written in Visual Basic 6.0 and compiled into machine code. The public domain program is used by the majority of intercollegiate and interscholastic debate tournaments including the National Debate Tournament (the college/university national tournament), the National Forensic League (high school national) Tournament, Harvard University, Northwestern University, Emory University, University of California at Berkeley, Wake Forest University, Stanford University, Georgetown University, the University of Kentucky, the University of Miami, and the University of Northern Iowa. TRPC is also used internationally throughout Russia and Eastern Europe as well as South Korea.

Tab Room on the Mac (Individual Events) (Computer software program for the scheduling, operation, and tabulation of the IE tournament); the program includes 40 interactive programs totaling 40,000 lines of code. This program has been used at the Texas Forensic Association state tournament for the past three years and is in use at many large high school and college tournaments throughout the nation. Written in FutureBasic and compiled into machine code.

Miscellaneous

Missions trip to Kenya, East Africa (July 16-29, 1999) sponsored by the Presbyterian Church of East Africa and the Africa Inland Church. My major responsibility was to deliver and install a computer system for student registration and records at Kaimosi Bible College in northwest Kenya. I also spent several days teaching communication-related courses at seminars in Limuru and Nakuru, sponsored by the Presbyterian Church of East Africa and the Africa Inland Church.
