The Paul J. Meyer Endowment Fund is designed to offer scholarships to students who demonstrate strong faith and leadership and a desire to take those skills into the workplace. Each spring students go through an application process and are chosen based on their answers, strong references, and fit into our program. Due to Covid-19 restrictions on Baylor’s campus, we were not able to host our dinner and awards banquet. Instead we held a smaller event off campus where we served dessert, listened to a guest speaker and presented the students with their awards. There were 36 students, faculty, staff, a guest speaker and members of Paul J. Meyer’s family in attendance. Gregory Campbell, PhD, who is a Consulting Partner for the Ken Blanchard Companies, shared with the students about his life and struggles as a young boy, and how having someone believe in him at a young age changed him and fueled him to do something positive with his life. He has over 25 years of high level training or facilitating programs. Gregory’s expertise is in developing and implementing a national leadership development program that involves talent management, course development, succession planning, mentoring, executive coaching, and emotional intelligence assessments for frontline employees, mid-level managers, executives, and senior executives.

The second week MBA students from across the country travel to Baylor and will compete in our 16th annual case competition in ethical leadership. Both weeks our competitors present to a panel of judges who also travel to Baylor for the competitions. We will have keynote speakers, the national MBA luncheon and the Ben Williams Distinguished Speaker Luncheon.
