Vice President- Sarah L. Lake (Psychology & Neuroscience)
Treasurer- Gustavo Chavarria (Chemistry)
Historian/Secretary- To be elected first meeting

Dear Fellow Graduate Students,

First of all, welcome to the 2010-11 academic year here at Baylor. To the returning students, we ask for your continued support and further input in creating an environment on campus where graduate students can thrive. To the new students, we would like to extend to you a special invitation to become involved with the Graduate Student Association (GSA). We serve the interests of graduate students by representing your concerns to the Baylor faculty, administration, and staff, and by providing services that are more effectively addressed as a group. In addition, the GSA organizes and co-sponsors social and academic events. All Baylor graduate students are automatically official GSA members, and we encourage you to consider the following possibilities for getting involved:

- Attend GSA Council meetings. The council meets every fourth Thursday of the month from 6-7 p.m. in Morrison 120. At these meetings information is shared about campus issues affecting graduate students. All graduate students are encouraged to attend and get involved, as this is where decisions are made that affect you.
- Become a Department Representative. Each department with graduate students selects one representative and one alternate to attend GSA Council meetings and share information with the students in their department. A GSA Representative votes on all major issues facing graduate students. Please let your graduate program director know if you are interested in being nominated to serve as a representative or alternate.
- Become a Committee Representative. As an active student organization, the GSA is invited to sit on a number of University committees and work with important issues that affect graduate students. The GSA needs graduate student representatives who are willing to sit on those committees to represent our interests and to report back with the details of the committee business.
- Stay in communication with your Department Representative. If you cannot make it to council meetings, let your representative know your opinion on the issues, as it is their job to represent you. The council functions best with input coming from every corner of campus so let your voice be heard!
- Watch your email for announcements of GSA Events. We will email all graduate students about GSA academic and social events such as Graduate Scholarship Forums, picnics at Cameron Park, awards for outstanding graduate students and teachers, grant-writing workshops, and more.

If you have any questions or concerns, please do not hesitate to contact us at: gsa@baylor.edu. We look forward to hearing from you throughout the coming year! Thanks, and once again, welcome to Baylor!

Research Support

Baylor University Honor Code

Baylor University students, staff, and faculty shall act in academic matters with the utmost honesty and integrity. To read the official honor code, visit the link above.

Libraries

Moody/Jones Library

The "Central Libraries" are composed of the Moody Memorial Library and the Jesse H. Jones Library. These two libraries, connected with a corridor on first and second floors, together serve as the main library facility on campus.

Moody & Jones Hours During the School Year:

Monday-Thursday 7:00am-1:00am

Friday: 7:00am-10:00pm

Saturday: 9:00am-10:00pm

Sunday: 1:00pm-1:00am

Armstrong Browning Library

The primary mission of the Armstrong Browning Library is to serve as a "library of record" of research materials relating to Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning; to acquire, preserve, and provide access for effective use of these materials and its other collections; and to promote opportunities for the study, appreciation, and understanding of the Brownings and the wider field of 19th-century literature and culture by the Baylor community, the larger academic community, and the general public.

Texas Collection

The Texas Collection is a special collection library in the Baylor University Library System. This special collection library has a focused holding of materials on Texas. By committing to a single focus, a special collection library provides a deeper understanding of the subject. The Texas Collection's holdings document the development of the Texas region from the earliest North American explorations to the present day.

The Basics

Here are three basic things you need to know as you begin using the libraries:

1. Bring your Baylor ID Card to the library each time—you must have it to check out materials or to use items on reserve.
2. The BearCat terminals located throughout the libraries provide electronic access to a large variety of search engines.
3. Although there is a general rule that you may only check out books from the Baylor libraries while you are currently enrolled in classes, graduate students are allowed to check out books if they have proof of Fall enrollment. During the summer, you need only be enrolled in one of the two summer sessions to obtain lending privileges for the entire summer term. If for some reason you are unable to enroll for classes but will need access to the library, inquire at the Circulation Desk about getting a TexShare card through the Waco-McLennan County Library. Be aware that you must have a Waco Library card in your possession for six months and be a patron in good standing (no lost or overdue books) before you are eligible to apply for a TexShare card.

Library Checkout Services

Baylor provides checkout services for many resources. Some include books and other materials, CDs, DVDs, iPods, Laptop/Projector Checkout, Reserves, and Inter Library Loans.

OsoFast

Occasionally, students may be unable to obtain the resources they need from Baylor's libraries. In those instances Baylor's interlibrary loan system, OsoFast is a valuable resource (sometimes referred to as ILL for interlibrary loan). OsoFast allows students to check out materials from participating libraries. Before students use this service, they should check BearCat to see if Baylor owns the item(s) they need. If the items cannot be accessed at Baylor, students can request them using OsoFast's online system and may log on using their Bear ID and password. Adding an ISBN will speed things up considerably, especially for hard-to-find requests. Students will be notified by email when the materials arrive. In some cases students may pick up books at the circulation desk and retrieve journal articles/book chapters through Baylor's electronic document delivery service. Books can also be renewed online through Osofast within 3 days of their due date if allowed by the sending library. Students can visit the Interlibrary Services office located near the entrance to Jones Library to return books retrieved through OsoFast.

Electronic Resources

Another key research tool for graduate students is the variety of electronic resources available on the library's website.

Information Technology Services \(ITS\)

Technology services for Baylor graduate students are similar to the services for the undergraduates with the following exceptions:

Successful use of technology is critical to student success. At Baylor, the central technology organization is Information Technology Services (ITS). The ITS website is linked above, and includes information on setting up computers for access to Baylor's campus wireless network – AirBear. Another important source of IT information for students is the student technology support group within the Electronic Library.

An additional option for 24x7 assistance with computing issues is the Baylor ITS online self-service portal. This website requires login with a BearID and password and includes answers to questions about certain software products (like Microsoft Office components) as well as answers to questions specific to Baylor, like how to reset a BearID password.

Computer and information security is critically important. Baylor's IT security program is called BearAware. Please take time to review this website which includes information on passwords, worms/viruses, and phishing, as well as the quarterly BearAware Bulletins. To help keep their computers functioning efficiently, students can download Symantec AntiVirus for no cost at by following this path on the Web:

<http://www.baylor.edu/its> → Help → Software and then clicking the link for "At-Home Software." Always remember that no valid request from Baylor will ask for a username or password through an email!

The ITS Computer Repair Shop primarily works on University-owned computers. However, they will do some trouble-shooting and repairs for individuals when possible. That phone number is 254-710-6520. The shop is located in the same parking garage as the main Baylor Bookstore.

Baylor students are eligible for certain software at a reduced price through the University's Microsoft Campus Agreement. Students can obtain (with a valid, active student ID card) one copy of Microsoft Office for either Windows or the Macintosh at the Baylor Bookstore. Discounted versions of Windows OS upgrades and Adobe software are also available at the bookstore.

Printing

Printing is available in many locations on campus. Baylor's print management system, called PawPrints, includes over 80 printers, many of which have duplexing capabilities. Graduate students receive 600 pages per semester.

Student Homepage

Graduate students may have an individual student homepage at Baylor using WordPress MU, a blogging technology, or through their individual BearSpace accounts. For those who have limited time to develop a site and want to take advantage of interactive features such as RSS feeds, blogging, and multimedia, WordPress is recommended. However, if you enjoy writing your own HTML code, BearSpace is for you.

Interfolio

You're considering fellowships or assistantships; or grants; or postdoctoral or full-time faculty positions – and Interfolio is the best way for you to apply to all of them. Interfolio is an online Academic Career Portfolio management service for graduate students specifically designed to help you reach the next step in your career path. They provide state-of-the-art tools that make it painless for you to apply instantly to any career opportunity. With Interfolio, you get complete control to collect your letters of recommendation and other important credentials, easily manage them online and securely deliver them to any destination, for any academic or professional opportunity. An Interfolio Portfolio can help you communicate your qualifications and expertise, meet all of your application requirements and get the positions you want. You tell them exactly when and how to deliver your credentials—electronically, on paper, or even “I-need-to-hit-this-deadline-I-just-found-out-about-yesterday” overnight express delivery—and have the peace of mind knowing that they'll take care of you and help you pursue every professional opportunity that comes your way.

Submitting a Dissertation or Thesis to BEARdocs

BEARdocs Baylor's repository for scholarly materials produced by faculty and students. All Baylor dissertations and thesis are deposited in BEARdocs.

Virtual Private Network (VPN)

In an effort to increase the security of Baylor University's information technology systems, off campus access to many information technology resources is limited. However, a student can get VPN access with sponsorship from a faculty member. Contact StudentVPN@baylor.edu for more information.

Computer Labs

Baylor provides students with convenient access to computers in many locations across campus.

Professional Development

Development of a graduate student into a professional involves presentation of the results of scholarly activities at professional meetings and other such forums. The Graduate School supports professional development of graduate students by awarding grants to defray costs of travel for participation in such meetings. During the 2009-2010 academic year, this program funded 316 awards to students totaling $93,550 in support. See travel awards for a detailed description of guidelines for funding.

Funding

Seminars for Excellence in Teaching

The Academy for Teaching and Learning (ATL) began in a major strategic proposal involving faculty, staff and students from all across the BU community. Many colleges and universities have long had centers to support teaching excellence. Baylor's vision drew on those predecessors but went even farther. From its name to its nature, the ATL was designed to be a "school-within-a-school," a program that focused on the most precious resources in any learning community: shared inquiry and transformative conversations Seminars for Excellence in Teaching (SET) is a program to equip graduate students, adjunct instructors, and temporary lecturers who are well-prepared Teachers of Record (TORs), to meet the historic expectations of excellence in teaching at Baylor. In addition, SET documents the SACS-required aspects of professional development for these teachers. SET offers a series of Core and one hour seminars on various aspects of teaching led by Baylor teacher/scholars who have been recognized for excellence.

Professionalism

Baylor University expects its employees to conduct themselves in a manner that positively reflects its Christian aims and mission. This includes graduate students employed or receiving funding from Baylor University towards their education.

Graduate Student Life at Baylor

The Baylor Tradition

The Baylor Line

In 1906, a student penned humorous words to the tune of “In the Good Old Summer Time.” Over time, they became accepted among the student body as the school song. In 1931, Mrs. Enid Markham, wife of music professor Robert Markham, felt the words were not dignified enough or representative of the total University. She wrote new lyrics and presented them in Chapel in November of that year. The “In the Good Old Summer Time” tune was later rearranged to fit Mrs. Markham’s “Baylor Line” by Baylor Band Director Donald I. Moore.

The Immortal Ten

On the misty-rainy morning of January 22, 1927, a shattering tragedy caused a pall of sadness to engulf the campus and brought national attention to the University. In Round Rock, shortly before noon, a speeding train smashed into a bus filled with Baylor basketball athletes and supporters. The accident left ten dead and numerous others injured. To remember those who lost their lives, the names of the “Immortal Ten” are called out every year during Homecoming Week, along with a monument build in 2007 on campus in Traditions Square.

Diadeloso

Started in 1931 as a way to “bring smiles to the faces of students” by giving them a break from classes, the annual spring holiday gradually became a favorite pastime. Re-organized by the Chamber of Commerce in 1935, its popularity grew and the name of the occasion changed from All University Day to Physical Fitness Day to May Day. In 1966, students voted to name the annual occasion “dia del oso,” or “Day of the Bear.”

The Green and Gold

In 1897, while on a train to Bryan for a debate tournament, a member of the student committee that had previously been selected to choose appropriate colors for the University, looked out the window at the wild spring dandelions and remarked that the vivid yellow and green flowers made “a lovely combination.” Other committee members present agreed and when they returned to Waco, the student body readily adopted the color combination of “green and gold.”

Chapel-Forum

Perhaps the longest running tradition since the University opened its doors in May 1846; Chapel has been a part of the Baylor experience. Requirements for participation once were daily attendance for the entire faculty, staff, and student body, but now all undergraduate students are required to attend two days per week for two semesters as a graduation requirement. Programs have varied from inspirational to informational to entertaining. The name was changed to Forum in the 1960s, then renamed two decades later to Chapel-Forum.

Ring Out

Begun in 1927 as a way to symbolize the continuity of the Baylor experience to the next year's graduates, Ring Out features the passing of an ivy chain from seniors to juniors during the week preceding commencement. Originally, participants were always female, but over the years male students have gradually been incorporated into the ceremony.

Pro Ecclesia, Pro Texana

These words indicate Baylor's commitment to the church and to the state (For Church, For Texas) and were adopted by the University's trustees as the institution's motto in 1854.

Baylor's Founders

Baptist minister William M. Tryon was the first to call for a Texas Baptist university "to meet the needs of the current generation of students as well as those of all ages to come." District Judge R.E.B. Baylor joined in the promotion of the idea, supported by the Texas Baptist Education Society (affiliated with the Union Baptist Association). James Huckins, the first Baptist missionary in Texas, was the University's first full-time fundraiser. These three men are credited as the founders, though there were many others who worked diligently to see the University established.

Baylor's Name

Petitioning the Congress of the Republic of Texas to establish a university, the Texas Baptist Education Society first suggested San Jacinto University to recognize the victory, which enabled Texas to become an independent nation. Next, it was changed to honor revolutionary hero Ben Milam. Just before the final vote of the Congress, the petitioners requested the university to be named in honor of Judge R.E.B. Baylor. Baylor University was officially chartered on February 1, 1945.

The University Mace

During the War of 1812, Cyrus Baylor, brother of Judge Baylor, was cited for his bravery with the presentation of a gold sword by President Jackson. It remained in the possession of the Baylor family until 1957 when it was given to Baylor University. In 1974, Baylor President Abner V. McCall suggested that the sword be used to form the focal point to a ceremonial "symbol of authority." A timber from one of Old Main's towers was used to construct a base and center pole and walking canes of former Baylor President Rufus C. Burleson and General Sam Houston, who had been baptized by Burleson and had been a supporter of the University, were linked to the sword to form the Mace. It is used at all University commencement exercises and at other special ceremonies.

Memorial Lampposts

During WWII, more than 4000 Baylor men and women served in all branches of the armed forces. At the end of the war, 123 had made the ultimate sacrifice in the defense of their country—a mortality rate said to be double that of the nation's population at large. To commemorate those who had fallen, red granite lampposts were erected across the campus to stand as a guard of honor by day and to illuminate the streets and paths by night. The first group of the granite "honor guards" was dedicated on October 25, 1946. A plaque, engraved with the name of the one who gave his/her life, was attached to every post. The Baylor chapter of Angel Fight was charged with the responsibility of placing a wreath around the plaque on the anniversary of each death. As the size of the campus increased, additional lampposts were erected and made available to commemorate the death of any loved one.

The Campus

For more than a year, there was no campus. After the University was chartered on February 1, 1945, four communities made bids to be the location—Travis, Huntsville, Shannon's Prairie, and Independence. Independence, TX was selected, and classes for preparatory students began in May 1846, with college courses offered the following June. In 1886, Baylor and Waco Universities consolidated to form Baylor University at Waco.

The Bears

The Baylor mascot could have been the buffalo, antelope, frog, ferret, or bookworm. After 70 years without an official mascot, students voted in 1914 to name the bear the official "Patron Saint of all Baylordom." The first bear to arrive on campus was a gift in 1917 from soldiers at Camp MacArthur.

Golden Wave Band

In 1928, the Baylor Band introduced its new gold uniforms at a Baylor-SMU football game. The following spring, the 43-member group made a tour of West Texas on behalf of the Greater Baylor Campaign to raise money for the University. Observers noted the band swept across West Texas like a giant golden wave, and the name was soon adopted for the band.

Homecoming

In November 1909, after six months of faculty and student planning, large delegations of former students converged on the campus to participate in a concert, receptions, speeches, class reunions, singing, a parade, pep rallies, and a football victory. It was Baylor's first "homecoming," which, except during the later years of WWII, has been an annual tradition and has grown to be one of the largest such activities in the United States.

The Lariat and Round-Up

In November 1900, the Varsity Lariat began publication to inform students about campus activities. Since 1893, the Baylor Literary had fulfilled such purposes, but competition with the new publication led to the demise of Literary in 1915. Later the name Varsity was removed from the paper's masthead. In 1902, the first yearbook was published and named The Round-Up.

Dr. Pepper Hour

In 1953, the director of the Union Building, now the Bill Daniel Student Center, scheduled a special hour each week for students to enjoy a "frosted Coke" and "talk amongst themselves." The weekly hospitality time was designed to provide students and faculty a special opportunity to relax, socialize, and talk informally. The event often featured piano music and board games, and there was always plenty of hot chocolate or cola mixed with ice cream.

All-University Sing

Ensembles from 17 organizations competed in the first "All-University Sing" on April 25, 1953. First held in the Drawing Room of the Union Building (now the Bill Daniel Student Center), the popularity of the event gradually caused it to be moved to the Waco Hall. Winners of the annual spring competition are invited to participate in the Pigskin Revue, a popular highlight of Homecoming Week.

Yell Leaders

Since the turn of the century and the rise of the popularity of athletic competition, various groups of individuals led cheers for the Baylor teams. However, there was no organized leadership for this activity until 1920 when the student body officially elected male representatives to lead the school yells. In 1968, females were allowed to be members.

Baylor University Sustainability

Baylor University seeks to provide an exemplary teaching, research, and outreach environment that fosters the conservation of natural resources, supports and enhances social responsibility, addresses community and economic development, and follows environmental, social, and economic practices.

Baylor also seeks continuous improvement in the planning, construction, and operation of capital facilities; providing transportation systems that support alternatives to single occupancy vehicles; procuring and managing energy, water, and materials; stewarding natural resources; and researching and teaching sustainability principles and approaches.

Get Involved!

In addition to inspiring conservation on campus, Baylor University also participates in Recyclemania, an annual ten-week recycling competition among colleges and universities across America. In spring 2009, Baylor University gathered over 86 tons of recyclable goods, surpassing the largest universities in Texas and placing third out of the Big XII.

Baylor University is also one of the few institutions in the nation that actively recycles before, during, and after athletic events. In 2009, Baylor mustered over 16,700 lbs of biodegradable products during sporting events, including over 267,200 individual plastic bottles.

In addition to Baylor University's impressive 2009 athletics and Recyclemania stats, food waste was reduced by 108.5 tons, three zero emission, electric utility vehicles are now on campus, and over 140,982 tons of recycling were collected in the spring semester alone.

Besides getting involved by recycling, you can also help us conserve energy by turning out the lights if you are the last one out of the room. This small gesture can really help us decrease our energy consumption and make a big impact over time. So remember, if you're the last out, turn the lights off!
