Biography/Profile

Chet Edwards was born in Corpus Christi, Nueces County, Texas, November 24, 1951. In 1974, he graduated Magna Cum Laude with a B.A. in Economics from Texas A&M University. He then worked for three years for Congressman Olin E. "Tiger" Teague, who was the most highly decorated World War II veteran in Congress and was known for 32 years as "Mr. Veteran" in Congress. At the age of 26, Edwards was encouraged by Congressman Teague to become his successor in 1978. Congressman Edwards narrowly lost in the Democratic primary to Phil Gramm, but then went on to earn an MBA from the Harvard Business School. In the 1980's, Congressman Edwards worked at the Trammell Crow Company in commercial real estate. Additionally, he owned and was the president of Edwards Communications, a rural radio station in South Texas.

From 1983 to 1989, Edwards served in the Texas Senate. As a Member of the Senate Education Committee, he played an active role in reducing class sizes in Texas' public schools and was named one of Ten Best Legislators by Texas Monthly. Edwards was first elected to the United States Congress in 1990. He served as a member on the House Budget Committee, the Appropriations Committee, and the Financial Services Appropriations Subcommittee, and as vice chair of the Energy and Water Appropriations Subcommittee. He also co-chaired the House Army Caucus. Congressman Edwards was known as a national champion for America's veterans, troops, and their families. After becoming Chairman of the Military Construction and Veterans Affairs Appropriations Subcommittee in 2007, Congressman Edwards authored a historic $17.7 billion increase in funding for veterans health care and benefits, the largest increase in veterans funding in the history of the Veterans Administration. Chairman Edwards also played a key role in enacting the 21st Century GI Bill of Rights into law, covering the full cost of a college education for our troops. In 2008, both the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars recognized Congressman Edwards' leadership with their national awards given to only one member of Congress.

When he represented Fort Hood, the world's largest Army base, Congressman Edwards played a major leadership role in support of the U.S. Army, troops, and military families. In 2007, he received the Marix Congressional Achievement Award from the Military Officers Association of America (MOAA) in recognition of his work. In 2006, Congressman Edwards was honored with the Award of Merit, the highest award given by the Military Coalition, which represents 36 military and veteran groups. In 2003, the Association of the U.S. Army gave Congressman Edwards its "Legislator of the Year Award." He was co-chair of the House Army Caucus for over a decade and served on the House Armed Services and Veterans Affairs Committees for six years before joining the Appropriations Committee. Early in his congressional career, Congressman Edwards became known as a leader in the fight against nuclear terrorism, and in 2001, strongly opposed cuts of $100 million to the nuclear non-proliferation budget proposed by the Bush Administration. Serving as a member on the Energy and Water Appropriations Subcommittee, Edwards helped to oversee key homeland defense and university research programs to protect Americans from the threat of nuclear terrorism. To ensure that more cargo coming into U.S. seaports was properly inspected, Edwards supported the implementation of the recommendations of the 9/11 Commission and, in 2003, helped secure $84 million to install radiological detectors at the busiest foreign ports so nuclear materials could be detected overseas before reaching America.

During his 20-year tenure in Congress, including 12 years of seniority on the powerful Appropriations Committee, Congressman Edwards developed a reputation of working hard and effectively for his Central Texas constituents. This reputation was the result of his commitment to protecting jobs and the local economy by making vital federal investments in key education, health, transportation, and water programs in his District. Securing important federal investments for Fort Hood, the Central Texas Veterans' Health Care System, and university research programs at Baylor and Texas A&M Universities was also a primary focus of Congressman Edwards' work in Washington. Edwards is known as a fiscal conservative who believes massive federal deficits and the multi-trillion national debt are harmful to our economy and morally wrong to pass on to our children and grandchildren. The non-partisan Concord Coalition gave him its "Deficit Hawk" Award. His pro-economic, pro-agriculture record also earned him endorsements from both the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the Farm Bureau Friends of Agriculture Fund (AGFUND). The U.S. Chamber of Commerce gave him their "Spirit of Enterprise" Award for several years for his support of business. As a strong supporter of Second Amendment rights, Congressman Edwards voted with the NRA 100% on gun rights issues for many years and received the NRA's endorsement.

As a respected voice on issues facing working families, Edwards pushed for increased access to health care for children of working families under the State Children's Health Insurance Program (S-CHIP), supported middle class tax cuts, and protected Medicare and Social Security benefits for America's seniors. As a lifelong person of faith, Chet was honored by the Baptist Joint Committee, and earned the Walter Cronkite Award from the Interfaith Alliance for his principled stand to keep government regulations out of churches and houses of worship. Congressman Edwards also received the T.B. Maston Christian Ethics Award.

In 2008, Congressman Edwards was vetted and became a finalist to become former Senator Barack Obama's Vice Presidential running mate. Since leaving Congress in 2011, Edwards was appointed the W. R. Poage Distinguished Chair of Public Service at Baylor University. He established Edwards, Davis Stover & Associates, LLC with his former chief of staff, Lindsey Davis Stover, and continues to be involved with veterans issues in the Washington, D.C. area through his work on the boards of the Military Child Education Coalition and the Arlington National Cemetery Advisory Commission.

Scope and Content

The collection consists of records, primarily covering the years 1990-2010, and chiefly documenting Edwards' career in the United States Congress. The Administrative files contain invitations and phone logs. The Campaign series consists of material recorded from 1990-2010. While relatively small, the majority of the materials include radio and television spot ads for Edwards related to his various political campaigns. Edwards represented Texas' 11th congressional district until 2005 and the 17th congressional district from 2005 to 2010. The District files contain information about the various cities and constituencies located in those districts and are arranged alphabetically by geographic location. Topics include town halls, Fort Hood, Baylor University, and Texas A&M University. Legislative files from the 102nd Congress (1991-1992) through the 111th Congress (2009-2010) reflect legislative priorities such as agriculture, appropriations, armed services, budget, homeland security, and veterans' affairs. Within each Congress, files are arranged alphabetically by topic. Press files generated by Edwards' office are organized by type: columns, mailers, news releases, newsletters, and radio calls. Materials are categorized as general for their broad scope and are organized chronologically. Newsletters contain documents addressed to constituents and are organized by topic. Speeches range in date from 1989-2009 and reflect Edwards' service in the U. S. House of Representatives and part of his tenure in the Texas Senate. Arrangement is topical and chronological. Topics include campaigns, commencements, fundraisers, House floor speeches, and impeachment. Many of the speeches are written in Edwards' own hand.

Topical series cover the gamut of activities and interests over his twenty years of service in the House. Of particular interest are records relating to the Branch Davidians, the Clinton Impeachment, and Religious Liberty. In 1993 February, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco & Firearms, and the FBI laid siege to the Branch Davidian compound, located ten miles from Waco. After 51 days, the siege ended tragically when a fire killed 76 people inside the compound, including the leader David Koresh. Materials include a copy of a response by Edwards to remarks made by Representative Ron Paul regarding the role of the federal government in the tragedy. The Clinton Impeachment proceedings in the House began during the second session of the 105th Congress and were completed in 1998 December. The Senate proceedings began in 1999 January. Of the impeachment proceedings, Congressman Edwards said, "Bill Clinton's crime was poor judgment and immoral acts, not bribery, not treason, not high crimes and misdemeanors as the Founding Fathers demanded." Materials include correspondence, Democratic Party press, proceedings, and research on the topics of impeachment, censure, and the Constitution. Edwards was a strong and effective voice on behalf of religious liberty, largely due to the influence of former Baylor University president Herbert H. Reynolds. Religious liberty documents are arranged alphabetically by topic. Each topic represents a major religious liberty/separation of church-state issue that transpired over his time in office. Included among the topics are: Charitable Choice (1995-2007), Religious Freedom Amendment (1994-2002), Religious Liberty Protection Act (1998-1999), and posting the Ten Commandments on public property (1997-2005). Edwards once stated, "The best way to ruin religion is to politicize it."

The collection also includes Voting Record files that include scorecards and data regarding Edwards' votes compiled by various special interest groups (Children's Defense Fund, NAACP and ACLU), the Democratic Party, and his own office. These materials are organized chronologically by congress. Audiovisual Materials include images, audio, and video recordings from 1990-2010. It contains radio and television campaign ads, recorded speeches, press reports, and other recordings. Data formats include: computer diskettes, videotape reels, audio cassettes, Digital Audio Tape (DAT), VHS tapes, Beta tapes, CDs, and DVDs.

Arrangement

A preliminary inventory arrived with the boxes in 2012. Material was arranged into series by office function or topic. Series include: I. Administrative, II. Branch Davidians, III. Briefing Books, IV. Campaigns, V. Clinton Impeachment, VI. District, VII. Legislative, VIII. Press, IX. Religious Liberty, X. Speeches, XI. Voting Record, XII. Audio-Visual, XIII. Clippings, XIV. Biography/Profile

In 1993 February, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco & Firearms (BATF), and the Federal Bureau of Investigations laid siege to the Branch Davidian compound approximately ten miles from Waco, Texas, where members had been stockpiling assault weapons under the orders of their leader, David Koresh. The confrontation began when BATF agents serving a warrant were ambushed by Branch Davidians. Four BATF and six Branch Davidians lost their lives in the initial skirmish, and the resulting siege lasted for 51 days. The siege concluded when a fire inside the Mt. Carmel compound killed 76 more Branch Davidians, 1993 April 19th. Blame for the incident is still heavily disputed. The collection includes transcripts, statements, related articles, background information on the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco & Firearms, and a letter regarding social worker Joyce Sparks' involvement. Materials include a copy of a response by Congressman Edwards to remarks made by Congressman Ron Paul regarding the federal government's role in the tragedy. A request from the city of Waco encouraging members of the government to disassociate the siege from the city in the press and a chronology of the tragic events are also included.

Administrative Information

Physical Description

General condition: Good.

Biography/Profile

The Briefing Books series includes the material that Edwards' staff compiled for him in preparation for meetings or events. Information included in these briefing books varied depending on the event. Time schedules, maps of the local area, and biographical sketches of the people Edwards came in contact with make up the content of many of these briefing books. Some briefing books were compiled as a reference guide for a specific topic or issue. For example, the briefing book on agriculture includes information on country of origin labeling (COOL), mad cow disease, and the estate tax — all pressing issues for the agriculture community in Edwards' district. The material in this series ranges in date from the year 2000 to 2006.

Of the impeachment proceedings, Congressman Edwards stated: "Bill Clinton's crime was poor judgment and immoral acts, not bribery, not treason, not high crimes and misdemeanors as the founding fathers demanded" and believed "Congress should concentrate on issues important to American families. The pressing issue is not impeachment, but saving Social Security, improving education, and providing health care reform". Material includes Correspondence, Democratic Party, Press, Proceedings, and Research on the topics of impeachment, censure, and the constitution.

Series 6. District, 1991-2010

Administrative Information

Physical Description

General condition: Good.

Biography/Profile

From 1991-2005, Edwards represented Texas' 11th Congressional District. Located in central Texas, this district ranged from San Saba County in the west to McLennan County in the east and from Bosque County in the north to the counties of Williamson and Milam in the south. In 2003, the state of Texas realigned its congressional districts, a source of much controversy and tension between Democrats and Republicans. As a result of the changes, Edwards now represented the 17th Congressional District, from 2005-2010. Edwards' new district essentially carved out the western counties of the old 11th and expanded to the southeast. College Station, home of his alma mater, Texas A&M University, was now included in his constituency.

Materials in this series relate to local happenings within his district and are arranged alphabetically by geographic location, such as by city or county. Topics include Town Halls, Ft. Hood, and Military Awards. Materials on Baylor University, Central Texas College, Hill College, and Texas A&M University are also found.

Among the materials reflecting his concerns for veterans and soldiers are documents describing his role in the dedication of the Thomas T. Connally Department of Veterans' Affairs Medical Center (1993) in Marlin, TX, as well as his cosponsoring of a bill expanding healthcare benefits for veterans of the Persian Gulf War. Edwards also supported various education programs to expand education opportunities for students.

Subseries 5. 106th Congress, 1999-2000

Administrative Information

Biography/Profile

During the 106th Congress, Edwards participated in debates on abortion laws and introduced a bill called the "Banning Late Term Abortions Act" that sought to make late term abortions illegal, except in cases where the mother's health or life were at risk. For appropriations, materials on funding for the Department of Defense, Postal Services, and Military Construction are found. In education, Edwards signed a letter to the Secretary of Education supporting the Partnership for Texas Public Schools, which was seeking funding under the Teacher Quality Enhancement Grant program for teacher training and reforming Texas education; the Partnership's application was approved and received funding. Numerous materials on legislation for Medicaid and prescription drugs are also in this subseries, as are materials regarding funding for airports in Texas and other requests from the Texas Department of Transportation.

Administrative Information

Biography/Profile

In the 109th Congress, Edwards signed a letter requesting greater federal assistance to alleviate the burdens of the ranchers and farmers, who were suffering from severe droughts and fires throughout Texas and Oklahoma. Also of note is a bill drafted by Edwards to prohibit the sales and rentals of adult rated video games to minors. In regards to veterans, Edwards opposed efforts that would have forced TRICARE beneficiaries to rely strictly on mail order prescriptions, leaving local pharmacies inaccessible. Edwards also labored to include the Waco Mammoth Site into the National Park System.

Administrative Information

Biography/Profile

The 111th Congress was Edwards' last term in office. During this term, Edwards introduced the Military Children's School Investment Act, which sought to enable grants for building and improving public schools. He also introduced the Central Texas Water Recycling Act of 2009, which sought to authorize the Secretary of Interior to participate in the planning of water reclamation projects in Central Texas, though Federal funding was limited to 25% of the total cost. Many of the materials from this congress are letters addressed to Edwards, Chairman of the Subcommittee on Military Construction, Veterans Affairs, and Related Agencies, thanking him for his support or informing of different projects.

Biography/Profile

Religious liberty documents are arranged alphabetically by topic. Each topic represents a major religious liberty and church-state debate during Edwards' time in office, some spanning several years. Indeed, Edwards worked diligently to prevent government policies and funding from violating religious freedoms, as prescribed in the First Amendment. He believed strongly in keeping religious and government entities separate. In his own words, he believed that "the best way to ruin religion is to politicize it." Important topics from his tenure include Charitable Choice legislation, the Religious Freedom Amendment (RFA), the Religious Liberty Protection Act (RLPA), and the Ten Commandments on public property. Below are more detailed descriptions of these materials.

Administrative Information

Biography/Profile

Charitable Choice materials contain essentially anything pertaining to the government funding of social programs operated by religious groups. Of all the religious liberty materials, the Charitable Choice subseries is perhaps the most complex because Charitable Choice provisions were found in a several pieces of legislation, though the Community Solutions Act of 2001 (H.R. 7) was one of the most prominent. Other related pieces of legislation include the American Community Renewal Act, the Fathers Count Act, and the Charitable Choice Expansion Act. The Job Improvement Training Act is also included here because it raised questions about federally funded job hiring discrimination via religious groups. Early documents date from 1995, but most of the material is from the late 1990s and early 2000s when Governor and later President George W. Bush advocated strongly for faith-based social programs. Supporters of the Charitable Choice provisions hoped to provide federal funds for religious social work programs to help administer addiction recovery and poverty relief, without compromising the integrity of the religious organization's mission. Opponents, including Edwards, the Baptist Joint Committee, etc., argued that the provisions would allow religious organizations to discriminate in hiring for federally funded positions; they also feared that the faith-based initiatives would allow the religious organizations, in effect, to use federal funds to proselytize to their clients. Correspondence contains letters to and from colleagues, constituents, organizations, churches, etc. pertaining to Charitable Choice. The General and Talking Points folders encompass a variety of notes and documents that provide general information about Charitable Choice, including points and information that explicitly supports or opposes the legislation, such as President Bush's "Rallying the Armies of Compassion." Also of note are the Speeches and Statements, many of which were authored and delivered by Edwards and fellow Congressmen on the House floor.

Biography/Profile

A few important court cases regarding the relationship of government and religion are in this subseries. Perhaps the most influential was the Supreme Court ruling for the City of Boerne vs. Flores case (1997), which effectively struck down the Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA). Other cases include Freedom from Religion Foundation vs. Faith Works (undated) and Locke vs. Davey (2003-2004). Documents for the cases include court briefs and opinions, as well as general overview material. Also of note is a letter by Edwards requesting admission to attend the formal oral hearings in the Supreme Court for the Locke vs. Davey case.

Biography/Profile

These documents pertain primarily to H. Con. Res. 94 (1999), which, in light of recent violent events across the country, sought to unite Americans in a day of prayer and fasting to ask "God to send spiritual strength and a renewed sense of humility to the Nation." Edwards adamantly opposed the resolution, particularly because it identified prayer as a "necessary duty" for individuals. Edwards argued that Congress had no right to tell citizens how or what to pray for. Documentation includes correspondence, legislation drafts and general material of the resolution, speeches and statements, results of the vote, and clippings about the resolution.

Subseries 7. Prayer at Football Games, 1999-2003, undatedAdministrative Information*Biography/Profile

Closely related to the debates about prayer in schools are the debates surrounding prayer at high school football games and other sporting events. In 1999, H. Con. Res. 199 was introduced to the House and sought to uphold prayers at public school sporting events as constitutional. Some opposed to the resolution affirmed their support for prayers in any venue, unless the prayers were sponsored by the state. In particular, Edwards argued the resolution was irrelevant because Congress had no power to decide the constitutionality of legislation since that power rested with the Supreme Court. The Correspondence, General, and Talking Points materials reveal the nuances of both sides of the argument. Also of note is the Supreme Court case Santa Fe ISD vs. Doe (2000) wherein the Supreme Court ruled, in essence, the pre-game prayers violated the First Amendment. The Supreme Court syllabus of the case is found in this series. Speeches and statements made by Edwards and others on the issue are also found.

Subseries 9. Religious Freedom Amendment (RFA)/Istook Amendment, 1994-2002, undated

Administrative Information

Biography/Profile

This is the largest subseries in Edwards' Religious Liberty papers. Most of the documentation refers to the Religious Freedom Amendment (RFA)/Istook Amendment, which was debated heavily in the late 1990s. The Religious Speech Amendment and the Religious Equality Amendment were other versions of the RFA and appeared in years before or after the RFA debate. All versions are compiled together.

After the Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA) was declared unconstitutional following the City of Boerne vs. Flores case, Ernest Istook (R-OK) hoped, in part, to restore the RFRA's protections by means of a constitutional amendment. RFA's language essentially sought to protect citizens' religious expressions in public settings, especially in schools. It stipulated that the government could neither restrict nor encourage prayers in school. Istook received support from many religious conservatives and religious groups, notably the Christian Coalition. Edwards, on the other hand, headed the efforts to defeat the Istook Amendment. He and the opposition argued that the amendment left too many questions unanswered, such as: Who would decide which prayers would be allowed? What about students who did not want to participate in school prayers? Do we really want satanic or pagan prayers in school, too? They also argued that students could already pray in school, as long as it was not disruptive, which meant the amendment was an extreme response to a nonexistent problem. The amendment was defeated because it failed to obtain the 2/3 vote necessary, but nevertheless received a majority of House votes.

The Baylor University (Dr. Derek Davis) folder contains correspondence and materials by Dr. Davis, the director of Baylor's J.M. Dawson Institute of Church-State Studies. He was also the editor of the Journal of Church and State. Case examples include specific instances of religious liberty violations as reported by both sides of the amendment debate and how they either supported or opposed the need for the amendment. Correspondence is divided into three categories: All letters to and from fellow congressmen; letters received and sent to any non-congressional figure or organization; and "thank you" letters to Edwards for his work against the amendment. Legislation contains different versions of the legislation and proposed amendments, while General contains materials that provide overview information about RFA and whether or not it would have desirable results. Religious Liberty Working Group addresses the team assembled by Edwards to construct and enact a strategy to defeat the Istook Amendment. Testimonies and statements feature many floor speeches and other statements by Edwards and Istook, as well as statements from a variety of religious and non-religious organizations.

Subseries 10. Religious Liberty Protection Act (RLPA), 1998-1999, undated

Administrative Information

Biography/Profile

Edwards cosponsored the Religious Liberty Protection Act (RLPA), which was an effort to restore religious protections from government interference after the Religious Freedom Restoration Act (RFRA) was declared unconstitutional. Particularly, RLPA hoped to protect religious practice from land use regulations that precluded religions from constructing houses of worship or assembling for worship, as well as from government employment requirements, such as taking a loyalty oath or shaving one's beard, that conflicted with religious beliefs. RLPA received broad congressional support and the support of many churches and organizations, secular and religious, such as the Baptist Joint Committee, the Episcopal Church, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the American Jewish Congress, People for the American Way, etc. Opponents of RLPA, such as the Human Rights Campaign and the ACLU, argued that it would enable discrimination based on religious tenets. To address these civil rights concerns, Jerrold Nadler (D-NY) offered an amendment that would have allowed only small landlords, religious institutions, and small business owners to claim religious exemptions in hiring and business transactions. The Nadler Amendment did not pass. Other opponents, such as the Home School Legal Defense Association, believed RLPA would fail constitutionality tests and that it would unduly expand federal power into religion and citizens' lives. RLPA passed the House vote 306-118.

Baylor University (Dr. Derek Davis) includes correspondence and writings of Dr. Davis, the director of Baylor's J.M. Dawson Institute of Church-State Studies. He was also the editor of the Journal of Church and State. Correspondence is divided into letters expressing either support or opposition to RLPA. Nadler Amendment folders contain material specifically related to the debate surrounding the proposed Nadler Amendment to RLPA. General and Talking Points materials include broader information about the bill, as well as simplified argument points made in favor or against the legislation. Testimonies and Statements feature statements by Edwards, as well as many statements by organizations and religious representatives before the House Judiciary Subcommittee on the Constitution.

Administrative Information

Biography/Profile

Edwards was frequently involved in debates surrounding the legality of posting the Ten Commandments on public property, especially in schools and court houses. He opposed the practice because he did not believe public spaces should sponsor the tenets of one faith over others; furthermore, he argued that religious principles are best learned at home, not in government buildings. On the other hand, proponents of posting the Ten Commandments argued that posting them would be one of several steps to encourage morality and curb violent behavior, particularly in schools. Additionally, they referred to polls that suggested Americans supported displaying the Ten Commandments in public buildings.

These materials include correspondence expressing support or opposition to posting the Ten Commandments. Of note is a letter from Roy S. Moore, a former Chief Justice in Alabama who sparked controversy when he refused to remove a Ten Commandments monument from his court room; in the letter to Edwards, Moore offered to donate the monument to the Capitol for display. Other materials include drafts of congressional acts regarding the Ten Commandments, talking points, and speeches made by Edwards and others.

Subseries 15. Wicca & Witches, 1997-1999, undated

Administrative Information

Biography/Profile

In the late 1990s, an intense debate emerged regarding the Army's allowance of Wiccans to openly practice their religion (witchcraft) at Fort Hood, which was located in Edwards' congressional district. Opponents were concerned that the Army had sanctioned the practice of witchcraft and believed that the Army had no legal responsibility to do so. Edwards, on the other hand, argued that, even though he and many others may disagree with the tenets of witchcraft, the Wiccans still had the constitutional right to practice their religion. Correspondence includes letters from Wicca leaders to Representative Bob Barr, a primary critic of Wicca, as well as letters from Barr to Edwards and military officers expressing his concerns about witchcraft. Also of note are materials containing the military's policies about religious practice and statements made by Edwards in defense of the Wiccans.
