Traditional China

President for life?
I wonder where Xi Jinping got that idea?

This course offers an introduction to the history of China from earliest times through the sixteenth century. In tracing the social, cultural, political, and intellectual developments of some three thousand years, the course presents an opportunity for students to explore both the grand themes and specific contingencies of a dynamic civilization. Covering such a long period of time in a vast and ever-changing territory, the course does not present a comprehensive examination of Chinese history. Rather, it provides the framework and tools to enable students to pursue individual interests and passions relating to China, past and present.

Britain in the 20th Century

Who were the British in the 20th Century?

Were they a strong empire or a world power in decline? Four divided nations or a melting pot for emigrants from former colonies? A European nation or a special partner to the USA? A global center of tech, fashion, rock and roll, and cosmopolitanism or an isolated island?

And what should they become in the 21st century?
