History of Warfare

An Introduction to Military History
M/W/F 9:05-9:55
Dr. David A. Smith / David_A_Smith@Baylor.edu

From the Greek phalanx to Cyber Warfare, this course is an introduction to the field of military history. We will cover the evolution of war on land and at sea, the influence of technology through the ages, and read some classics of military history and theory.
The Beast in the East: Witchers, Wars, & Women rulers in Slavic Europe, 1683-1913

Slavic Studies engages students in the history of Eurasia, a region where conflicts over nationalism, religion, and state modernization efforts played out more often than anywhere else in Europe from 1683 to 1913. Culturally, the course engages the heights of the region’s output in the long 19th century, including Dostoevsky, Mucha, and Dvorak, as well as the rich popular culture of folklore from which Andrzej Sapkowski’s Witcher series draws. Slavic Studies simulates the conflict and diplomacy among imperial states and national movements that changed Slavs’ presence on the map of Europe. The course will connect 21st century national cultures, wars, and politics to relevant historical themes from the era.

The course will investigate the physical, social, and cultural relationships between humans and their environment. We will explore how settlers (both Indigenous and Old World) depended upon and transformed the natural world. We will view environment as an active participant in the history of the US, not a passive backdrop to American progress. This course is intended as a broad survey of the topic and does not require previous background in the field.

From the legendary foundation of an East Slavic State to the modern crisis of its feudal system, this course examines the major facets of a millennium of Russian history. The course will pay consistent attention to extraordinary cultural development through three source types: folklore, literature, and ideology. The experiences of women, youth, and the peasantry will inform the study of social change. To grapple with the concept of continuity in history and consider the change over time from a diffuse riverine kingdom to autocratic empire, students will simulate the historical decision making of the Novgorod Republic, reign of Catherine II, and Congress of Vienna.
