So your department needs student workers?

Students may only volunteer to assist departments with tasks or events when they are part of an approved Baylor student organization project. Students who assist departments outside of an approved Baylor student organization project should actually be set up as student workers.

According to employment law, students may not volunteer to perform job duties for which others receive compensation. Designating students appropriately as student workers helps the University stay compliant within employment regulations, but more importantly it ensures the students are compensated fairly for work they perform.

If you have questions about a student’s employment status, please contact the Office of Student Employment by emailing Student_Employment@baylor.edu or by calling 254-710-4100.
