Four organizations punished for hazing

Library sings political ‘toon’ with exhibit

Students find new ways to avoid parking squeeze

Students find new ways to avoid parking squeeze
Editorial

Fashion models still too skinny

Sometimes it’s not enough because the media’s message from some people is to be thin. The fashion modeling industry, with its anorexia problem, models in particular, and certainly the recent fashion show by Victoria’s Secret, has many problems with this issue. Just as the fashion industry has been focusing on the healthy lifestyle of sports, you name it, and it was the same way with many of the one-month intake classes. The recent fashion show, the center of attention didn’t fall quite as badly on clothes but once again fell on the skinny models. Again, the attention was positive, and to think about the robots strutting down the catwalk is quite thin in the case of even the size. Height, as its need, and of course, like most of the “Green” as a trend is inaccurate are the new lines. However, the models strutting down the runway for the story centers on the city council did.

The models are also another country trying to change the image of the modern model. The French National Assembly has taken an aggressive step toward legislation that would make it illegal to report on models’ weight in the media. The model’s lower house has said it will write its own bill, but so far, with votes and even with the French Senate, which was against this legislation, is still not sure about what to do about the cause.

Models are still representative of the general female population. Even through models, they do not have the model’s job. They do not have the model’s job.

Speaking about breaking into modeling, MTV’s channel with its audience is about the cause. The future models have the right to know about the cause. What’s more, the modeling and fashion industries should take a quest for Dove, a company that has made a buzz because of its campaign. The fashion industry has a way in as well. For now, hold your applause.

The next step is to think not only about what people are wearing but also the message that is delivered. It is obvious that the models cannot change the message. What’s more, the modeling and fashion industries have a way in as well.

Letters to the editor

* denotes member of editorial board

Green® as a trend is inaccurate

Summertimeлючes below Baylor’s recent Bayleaf article on the environmentally friendly tactic of allowing the use of the trend in the residence halls. That article isWrong. Many green environmental efforts are being inhibited by the use of the trend in the residence halls.

Models have long been encouraged to emulate the thin supermodel physique. They’ve been dieted and defiled by lean and green women who opt to slim down their body type. They’ve become the standard of beauty, which is not in the best interest of the college community. They do not model the same standards themselves.

By the way, have you thought of what you are eating for yourself? That’s the first thing you should consider. Dieting is bad for your body, and it’s bad for your health.

The Council of Fashion Designers of America (CFDA) needs to join in pursuit of raising awareness and addressing the concern about underweight models, too skinny, fragile, and unhealthy. The models cannot take on the back because they are still thin, but they don’t have the time to work on them. Modeling is a job. This is how these girls are working so hard to try to do their little dresses, cocktails, and the like. The job’s not just making clothes that look like a dress. Modeling is a job. This is how these girls are working so hard to try to do their little dresses, cocktails, and the like. The job’s not just making clothes that look like a dress. Modeling is a job.

Sometimes it’s not enough because the media’s message from some people is to be thin. The fashion modeling industry, with its anorexia problem, models in particular, and certainly the recent fashion show by Victoria’s Secret, has many problems with this issue. Just as the fashion industry has been focusing on the healthy lifestyle of sports, you name it.

The models are also another country trying to change the image of the modern model. The French National Assembly has taken an aggressive step toward legislation that would make it illegal to report on models’ weight in the media. The model’s lower house has said it will write its own bill, but so far, with votes and even with the French Senate, which was against this legislation, is still not sure about what to do about the cause.

Models are still representative of the general female population. Even through models, they do not have the model’s job. They do not have the model’s job.

Speaking about breaking into modeling, MTV’s channel with its audience is about the cause. The future models have the right to know about the cause. What’s more, the modeling and fashion industries should take a quest for Dove, a company that has made a buzz because of its campaign. The fashion industry has a way in as well.

Letters to the editor

* denotes member of editorial board

Green® as a trend is inaccurate

Summertimeлючes below Baylor’s recent Bayleaf article on the environmentally friendly tactic of allowing the use of the trend in the residence halls. That article isWrong. Many green environmental efforts are being inhibited by the use of the trend in the residence halls.

Models have long been encouraged to emulate the thin supermodel physique. They’ve been dieted and defiled by lean and green women who opt to slim down their body type. They’ve become the standard of beauty, which is not in the best interest of the college community. They do not model the same standards themselves.

By the way, have you thought of what you are eating for yourself? That’s the first thing you should consider. Dieting is bad for your body, and it’s bad for your health.

The Council of Fashion Designers of America (CFDA) needs to join in pursuit of raising awareness and addressing the concern about underweight models, too skinny, fragile, and unhealthy. The models cannot take on the back because they are still thin, but they don’t have the time to work on them. Modeling is a job. This is how these girls are working so hard to try to do their little dresses, cocktails, and the like. The job’s not just making clothes that look like a dress. Modeling is a job.

Sometimes it’s not enough because the media’s message from some people is to be thin. The fashion modeling industry, with its anorexia problem, models in particular, and certainly the recent fashion show by Victoria’s Secret, has many problems with this issue. Just as the fashion industry has been focusing on the healthy lifestyle of sports, you name it.
Well-rounded resume best kind

By Molly MacEwan

The bottom line is it should make your phone ring," Poll said. He explained that your phone should be ringing for you to get to the next step.

"Poll informed interested students that getting straight A's in college is not the best path to getting a job. Research shows that employers are looking for things other than A's. Poll explained that students need to stay current with the information on their field. He recommended reading magazines or news online to help keep up with the changes happening in the field.

"I think the thing that he said to the students is if you want to stay current with your information in your field, you need to help give me an edge over my competitors," said Lindsey Fryar, Kansas City, Mo., senior. Poll talked about the need to put the things on a resume even if a student thinks they aren’t important. "If you are looking for a job, you want to see that you are not only a 4.0 student but also have some club on campus that demonstrates you as a leader or your major," Poll said.

"I want to add on to your resume that you have a job outside of college," Poll said. Poll also informed students that they need to stay current with the information on their field. He acknowledged this was a very touchy area for students.

He went on to explain that students should be doing things that not only demonstrate their ability but also show that they care about their work. "I want to see that you want to do a job," Poll said. "I want to see that you care about your major. If you don’t care about your major, what’s the point of staying in college?"

"He said the three things that he finds most helpful in his training, are that his current students are markable because they guide students to write a résumé that will help students be unique. Poll also said that employers were looking for people with a strong background in a specific field. He told students that they need to make sure that they have a strong background in their field.

"I think that’s really important," Poll said. "If you want to stay current with your information in your field, you need to help give me an edge over my competitors." He went on to explain that students should be doing things that not only demonstrate their ability but also show that they care about their work. "I want to see that you want to do a job," Poll said. "I want to see that you care about your major. If you don’t care about your major, what’s the point of staying in college?"

"He said the three things that he finds most helpful in his training, are that his current students are markable because they guide students to write a résumé that will help students be unique. Poll also said that employers were looking for people with a strong background in a specific field. He told students that they need to make sure that they have a strong background in their field.

"I think that’s really important," Poll said. "If you want to stay current with your information in your field, you need to help give me an edge over my competitors." He went on to explain that students should be doing things that not only demonstrate their ability but also show that they care about their work. "I want to see that you want to do a job," Poll said. "I want to see that you care about your major. If you don’t care about your major, what’s the point of staying in college?"

"He said the three things that he finds most helpful in his training, are that his current students are markable because they guide students to write a résumé that will help students be unique. Poll also said that employers were looking for people with a strong background in a specific field. He told students that they need to make sure that they have a strong background in their field.

"I think that’s really important," Poll said. "If you want to stay current with your information in your field, you need to help give me an edge over my competitors." He went on to explain that students should be doing things that not only demonstrate their ability but also show that they care about their work. "I want to see that you want to do a job," Poll said. "I want to see that you care about your major. If you don’t care about your major, what’s the point of staying in college?"

"He said the three things that he finds most helpful in his training, are that his current students are markable because they guide students to write a résumé that will help students be unique. Poll also said that employers were looking for people with a strong background in a specific field. He told students that they need to make sure that they have a strong background in their field.

"I think that’s really important," Poll said. "If you want to stay current with your information in your field, you need to help give me an edge over my competitors." He went on to explain that students should be doing things that not only demonstrate their ability but also show that they care about their work. "I want to see that you want to do a job," Poll said. "I want to see that you care about your major. If you don’t care about your major, what’s the point of staying in college?"

"He said the three things that he finds most helpful in his training, are that his current students are markable because they guide students to write a résumé that will help students be unique. Poll also said that employers were looking for people with a strong background in a specific field. He told students that they need to make sure that they have a strong background in their field.

"I think that’s really important," Poll said. "If you want to stay current with your information in your field, you need to help give me an edge over my competitors." He went on to explain that students should be doing things that not only demonstrate their ability but also show that they care about their work. "I want to see that you want to do a job," Poll said. "I want to see that you care about your major. If you don’t care about your major, what’s the point of staying in college?"

"He said the three things that he finds most helpful in his training, are that his current students are markable because they guide students to write a résumé that will help students be unique. Poll also said that employers were looking for people with a strong background in a specific field. He told students that they need to make sure that they have a strong background in their field.

"I think that’s really important," Poll said. "If you want to stay current with your information in your field, you need to help give me an edge over my competitors." He went on to explain that students should be doing things that not only demonstrate their ability but also show that they care about their work. "I want to see that you want to do a job," Poll said. "I want to see that you care about your major. If you don’t care about your major, what’s the point of staying in college?"

"He said the three things that he finds most helpful in his training, are that his current students are markable because they guide students to write a résumé that will help students be unique. Poll also said that employers were looking for people with a strong background in a specific field. He told students that they need to make sure that they have a strong background in their field.

"I think that’s really important," Poll said. "If you want to stay current with your information in your field, you need to help give me an edge over my competitors." He went on to explain that students should be doing things that not only demonstrate their ability but also show that they care about their work. "I want to see that you want to do a job," Poll said. "I want to see that you care about your major. If you don’t care about your major, what’s the point of staying in college?"

"He said the three things that he finds most helpful in his training, are that his current students are markable because they guide students to write a résumé that will help students be unique. Poll also said that employers were looking for people with a strong background in a specific field. He told students that they need to make sure that they have a strong background in their field.

"I think that’s really important," Poll said. "If you want to stay current with your information in your field, you need to help give me an edge over my competitors." He went on to explain that students should be doing things that not only demonstrate their ability but also show that they care about their work. "I want to see that you want to do a job," Poll said. "I want to see that you care about your major. If you don’t care about your major, what’s the point of staying in college?"

"He said the three things that he finds most helpful in his training, are that his current students are markable because they guide students to write a résumé that will help students be unique. Poll also said that employers were looking for people with a strong background in a specific field. He told students that they need to make sure that they have a strong background in their field.

"I think that’s really important," Poll said. "If you want to stay current with your information in your field, you need to help give me an edge over my competitors." He went on to explain that students should be doing things that not only demonstrate their ability but also show that they care about their work. "I want to see that you want to do a job," Poll said. "I want to see that you care about your major. If you don’t care about your major, what’s the point of staying in college?"

"He said the three things that he finds most helpful in his training, are that his current students are markable because they guide students to write a résumé that will help students be unique. Poll also said that employers were looking for people with a strong background in a specific field. He told students that they need to make sure that they have a strong background in their field.

"I think that’s really important," Poll said. "If you want to stay current with your information in your field, you need to help give me an edge over my competitors." He went on to explain that students should be doing things that not only demonstrate their ability but also show that they care about their work. "I want to see that you want to do a job," Poll said. "I want to see that you care about your major. If you don’t care about your major, what’s the point of staying in college?"
ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Wednesday, September 17, 2008

Lori Uhrich of Metallica performs with the band as they presented their latest album "Death Magnetic" in Dallas.

"Death Magnetic" reaches back to Metallica's roots
By Christina Kruse

"Death Magnetic" returns to the old "Metallica" sound, which made rock n roll so popular during the 1980s.

Album Review
Metallica has been a part of the music scene since the 1980s. Their unique style and creativity has set them apart from other bands. The band's main lyricist, usually James Hetfield, has written many popular songs. The band's hits include "Enter Sandman," "Master of Puppets," and "The Black Album."

"Death Magnetic" is the first Metallica album in eight years. The band members, who are well known for their creativity, have put together a new album that is sure to please their fans.

The album features tracks such as "Even If It Takes a另一个世界," "All Nightmare Long," and "The Judas Kiss." These songs showcase the band's musical talent and creativity.

The album has received positive reviews from music critics. Many fans are excited to hear the new music and are looking forward to the band's upcoming tour.

If you are a Metallica fan, you should definitely check out "Death Magnetic." The album is sure to be a hit and is sure to please their fans.
Dorsch advances over BU's Mueller

By Andrew Martinez Reporter

The Baylor men's tennis team opened its fall schedule last weekend when they competed in the Pro-Circuit, which was held at the Baylor Tennis Center. The Bears won both their singles and doubles matches, with their overall play reaching a new level, including the top singles player Matthew Dorsch.

The team is getting an early start to the season, with hopes they will become a winning combination for the Baylor Bears.

"It's the best chance for fans to see them up close before the upcoming fall tournament," said coach Abe Lemons. "They're going to get to be the Rafael Nadal of tennis, if you will." Dorsch is one of the team's captains.

He said getting back to football after the loss in straight sets to Borvanov and Sirianni 6-1, 6-4. "It's definitely going to help my tennis, but it's pretty easy to see how much he's improved since last year," Knoll said. "He's really matured his body and his game, and he's really starting to think like a singles player when he comes into the matches.

Coach and Rux also lost in straight sets to Borvanov and Sirianni.

Kevin Knoll and the rest of the Baylor men's tennis team will be looking forward to the next match against Texas, who they have a history with.

The Bears have won the last 13 meetings against the Longhorns, and they hope to continue their success against their rivalry.

The team is currently ranked 96th in the nation, and they look to improve their standing with each match.

by Kristie Rieken

HOUSTON — Mario Williams won't be the only Texas football player with family in the stands when the Texas Longhorns return to the field Tuesday. The Texans also have a number of players who have family in the stands.

The Texans are hoping that the fans will come out to support the team as they face the Saints in their first game of the season.

The Saints have lost four of their last five games, while the Texans have won three of their last four.

The game is expected to be a close battle, with both teams looking to prove themselves on the field.

The game will kick off at 8 p.m. Central Time.

The Associated Press

2008 Inductees

LaBianca Tomlinson

Lance Berkman

A USC native, Berkman graduated from New Seladale High School in 1986 and attended SMU in Dallas, where he played baseball.

Berkman was selected by the Houston Astros in the first round of the 2005 draft.

He has been a three-time All-Star and a five-time Gold Glove winner.

Berkman is also a former head coach of the South Carolina Gamecocks.

He was named the head coach of the Gamecocks in 2016 and has led them to three NCAA Tournament appearances.

Berkman has also been involved in community outreach programs in the Houston area.

The Associated Press

Waco's Tomlinson, Berkman inductees

A University High school grad, Tomlinson played college football at 3U2 and was named to the All-State team in 1999.

He then went on to play in a single-game recording with the Bears at Texas University. He helped lead the Bears to two NCAA Tournament appearances.

One of the biggest names in this year's class is Waco's own Lance Berkman, who was selected by the Houston Astros in the first round of the 2005 draft.

He has been a three-time All-Star and a five-time Gold Glove winner.

Berkman is also a former head coach of the South Carolina Gamecocks.

He was named the head coach of the Gamecocks in 2016 and has led them to three NCAA Tournament appearances.

Berkman has also been involved in community outreach programs in the Houston area.

The Associated Press
HAZING from page 1

She also mentioned one change that would come this year, the creation of a new team known as the Anti-Hazing Committee.

"I don’t know why they feel they need to do that," Palacios said. "I think the problem itself was pretty overhyped."

Palacios said she didn’t want to give any more details regarding the internal investigation.

According to Baylor policy and state law, hazing is defined as an intentional or reckless act that endangers the mental or physical health or safety of a student. It can include any action that is intended to induce or cause fear in a student, either directly or indirectly.

"It doesn’t have to be a physical act," Palacios said. "Any activity that is intended to cause fear in a student is hazing."

Criminals

If enough evidence is found, the board reviews the allegations and imposes sanctions "in a fashion that is fair and consistent," Palacios said. "If we can’t come up with a fair process, then we don’t have one."

"We want to empower them," Palacios said. "We want to partner with students. We’re going to be seen as good and not as an adversary."

SQUEEZE from page 1

Pedestrians need to use caution around the parking garages, including the Freshman and Speight Plaza parking garages, as shuttle service is suspended during the day due to the strain put on the system, according to a university shuttle driver.

"We have experienced an increase in the population of skateboarders and cyclists," said a University Transportation Planner for A&M-Commerce. "Many people are using the bikes that are available on campus or on the Spear’s Savings."

"It’s unfortunate," Brown said. "I have seen it happen repeatedly that people don’t understand what we’re trying to do."

The shuttles are dependable in the past, according to Peggy Jaray, transportation planner for West Campus, but that was before the changes in the routes. In some cases, the shuttles have run late because it was overwhelming for the shuttles to get from point A to point B. "We’re not sure what happened," Jaray said. "It has been a lifesaver to have the shuttles run on time."