Before You Go

Routine Medical Care

- Obtain any necessary routine medical/dental care before you leave.
- Carry a copy of your personal health record with you when you travel.
- Pack an ample supply of prescription and routine medications in their original packaging. Place them in your carry-on luggage, with copies of your prescription.
- Consider carrying a doctor's note explaining your need for legal, non-prescription drugs you have packed - in English and the language of your destination(s).

Routine Vaccinations

- All routine vaccinations should be current; these include: Measles-Mumps-Rubella, Polio, Tetanus-Diphtheria-Pertussis, and Varicella.
- Influenza occurs in the northern and southern hemisphere winters and year-round in the tropics. Consider an annual vaccination.

Vaccinations for India

Recommendations may vary for short-term visitors. Always consult your travel health advisor or contact International SOS to discuss your specific needs.

Malaria

Spread By: Insect Bites

Malaria is present in most of India, including cities such as Delhi and Mumbai (Bombay).

There is no malaria:
- At altitudes higher than 2,000 meters (6,561 feet) in Himachal Pradesh, Jammu and Kashmir (in the north of the country) and Sikkim (Nepal’s eastern border)

There is malaria:
- In all other areas, including the cities of Delhi and Bombay (Mumbai)

Malaria is transmitted by mosquitoes that usually bite from dusk to dawn. Symptoms can develop as early as six days or as late as several months after exposure. Early symptoms are usually “flu-like.” Vivax malaria and ova malaria typically progresses to cause relapsing fever and chills, while falciparum malaria can also have life-threatening complications including anemia, seizures, mental confusion, kidney failure and coma. Travelers suffer these complications more frequently than local inhabitants.

PREVENTING MALARIA

If visiting a malarial area:
- Focus on preventing mosquito bites
- In addition, a preventive anti-malarial drug may be recommended for you. Consult your travel health practitioner: (As medication is not 100 percent effective, preventing mosquito bites is still very important.)

Malaria in this country is resistant to the medication chloroquine. Appropriate antimalarial medications include:
- Atovaquone plus proguanil (Malarone®)
- Doxycycline (many brands and generics)
- Mefloquine (Lariam® and generics)
- Mefloquine may not be appropriate if you visit these six countries, as they have areas of mefloquine resistant malaria: Cambodia, China, Laos, Myanmar, Thailand, Vietnam. Discuss your exact itinerary with a travel health professional.

While in India

Food and Water Precautions

Travelers have a small risk of developing diarrhea in any country; it may be advisable to drink bottled water only, especially on short trips. Always wash your hands with soap before eating, or use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer. See the following country-specific recommendations:

Water and Beverages

Tap water is unsafe to drink. Drink boiled or bottled water, or carbonated beverages, provided that the seal is intact. Look for bubbles when you open a carbonated beverage - bubbles are evidence that the product has been processed. Bottles are sometimes refilled with tap water and resold, and these products are not safe to drink.

Avoid ice because it can be made from unsafe water. Do not rinse your mouth or toothbrush with tap water, and do not open your mouth in the shower.

Do not purchase unsealed drinks or ice cream made by street vendors. These may contain untreated tap water and the equipment used may not have been properly cleaned. Coffee and tea made from boiling water are safe to drink, as are beer and wine. It is best to use ultra filter (UF) or canned milk that has been pasteurized.

India Cultural Tips

General Cultural Tips

- Travelers must obtain an alcohol consumption license to drink alcohol in certain Indian states. Licenses can be obtained for free at the airport.
- Remove shoes before entering an Indian home.
- It is considered impolite to point with your finger, to whistle and to position your feet in the direction of another person.
- Always use your right hand to accept or pass food. Never offer another person food from your plate.
- Because the cow is considered sacred, Hindus do not eat beef.
- Gifts should not be opened in the presence of the giver.

Business Cultural Tips

- Men shake hands upon meeting and when departing. Western businesswomen should not initiate handshaking with Indian men.
- The traditional greeting, known as the namaste, may be appropriate when a handshake is not. Do this by putting your palms together, bow slightly and say "namaste". (This means "I salute the godlike qualities within you").
- It is advisable to be punctual to appointments. However, your Indian counterpart may be late. Indian executives prefer late morning or early afternoon appointments.
- Always address Indians by their professional titles or by Mr., Mrs., Miss. Do not use their first names unless invited to do so.
- Hospitality, such as tea and small talk is a part of conducting business.
- Men should wear a suit and tie. (Jackets may be removed in the summer.) Women should wear conservative dresses or suits.

Business Hours

- Mon-Sat: 1000-1800 (with lunch between 1300-1400).

Tipping

- Tipping of up to 10% is expected in India.
- Porters should receive at least INR 2-5 for each piece of luggage.
India Electricity

Voltage and Frequency

Current is 220–240 volts AC, 50Hz.

Most common plug(s) used with mobile equipment (e.g., notebook computers).

Political party schedules rally for 15 November in Jammu over alleged corruption

The opposition Awami National Conference (ANC) party has called on its supporters to rally on 15 November in Jammu, the winter capital of India-administered Jammu and Kashmir state, to denounce alleged official corruption. ANC supporters are expected to march from the Jammu Press Club, near the Exhibition Ground, to Indira Chowk on the day.

Comment and Analysis
It is unclear if the event will be well attended. However, even limited crowds can be expected to cause a measure of traffic disruption in Jammu on the day, particularly in the vicinity of the Indira Chowk roundabout. Although the rally is expected to be peaceful, there is a credible potential for clashes between protesters and the police, or between rival activists, which may pose incidental risks to personnel in the vicinity. The ANC, a breakaway faction of the ruling National Conference party, has been demanding greater transparency regarding the assets of political leaders. Further demonstrations over the issue are possible in the coming weeks.

Travel Advice
- Avoid all demonstrations due to the risk that they will degenerate into unrest.
- Avoid all but essential travel to Kashmir because of the risks posed by frequent unrest, which may occur with little or no warning and poses significant incidental risks.
- Travel to the Line of Control between India- and Pakistan-administered Jammu and Kashmir (including the Jammu-Srinagar-Leh road) and to border regions with Pakistan within India-administered Jammu and Kashmir should be for essential purposes only.
- Travel to all other areas of India-administered Jammu and Kashmir can continue, though travellers should monitor developments during their stay and exercise caution at times of heightened tension.
- Keep abreast of the timing and venue of planned protests and plan routes circumventing them. Do not attempt to cross roadblocks as this may elicit a violent response from the demonstrators.
- Seek professional security planning prior to travel in India-administered Jammu and Kashmir due to the risks posed by militant separatist activity. Be aware that travel to the area is periodically restricted by general strikes or by the authorities. Curfews may be imposed at times of heightened tension and special permission to travel may be required.
- This above advice is not exhaustive; please refer to our Standing Travel Advice for India.

CRIME
The major cities of the capital Delhi, Mumbai (Maharashtra state), Kolkata (West Bengal state), Chennai (Tamil Nadu state), Hyderabad (Andhra Pradesh state), Bangalore (Karnataka state), Ahmedabad (Gujarat state) and Pune (Maharashtra) register a moderate-to-high crime rate. However, petty and opportunistic crime poses the main risk; confidence tricksters will prey on foreigners. Travellers should be wary of over-friendly people who approach and persistently offer to change money or provide other services; such approaches should be firmly declined. There have also been isolated incidents of travellers being drugged or poisoned. Instances of crimes against women, including physical harassment and rape, have increased, especially in urban areas and tourist destinations across the country.

Robberies in suburban areas typically target isolated or poorly protected residences. Gang crime is common, but foreigners are generally not directly affected. Similarly, instances of murder, often arising from land disputes, are fairly common in rural areas, but do not affect foreigners. However, as a general rule, personnel should avoid becoming embroiled in public confrontations with locals; such disputes will quickly attract a crowd and the mood can rapidly turn ugly.

SOCIAL UNREST
Although the democratic environment is able to accommodate most protests, civil disorder can occasionally be provoked and poses a significant threat to the safety of foreign personnel. Political rallies frequently witness clashes. Foreign visitors are unlikely to be singled out for attack – the exceptions being journalists and photographers, whose presence is often considered provocative – but they can inadvertently be caught up in unrest. If violence spreads throughout a city, personnel should remain in their hotel or a secured location until the unrest subsides. The authorities regularly impose curfews, which should be obeyed at all times. During volatile situations, business travellers and expatriates should ensure that their actions, such as crossing roadblocks, cannot be regarded as provocative.

Tensions between ethnic groups can degenerate into violence. These may be triggered by religious, language or caste issues. What was believed to be a Muslim attack on a train carrying Hindu activists in Godhra (Gujarat) in February 2002 prompted Hindu/Muslim clashes that continued intermittently for four months. Estimates of the number of people killed ranged from 1,000 to 2,000. Communal unrest can affect any city with religious divisions, though it is more common in cities such as Hyderabad and in the state of Uttar Pradesh, which have powerful large Muslim minorities. Disturbances are most often concentrated in specific areas of a city (often the poorest quarters), but have on occasion spread to city centres.

In recent years, Hindu nationalist groups have launched sporadic attacks on Christian communities and interests in some rural areas – particularly in the eastern state of Orissa – accusing them of engaging in

Introduction

CITY SECURITY OVERVIEW

Delhi's status as the capital renders it vulnerable to terrorist attacks. However, the greatest risk for most visitors is petty crime, including pickpocketing, which is prevalent in crowded markets in Old Delhi, Connaught Place, Sarojini Market, Karol Bagh, Lajpat Nagar Central market, Janpath, Palika Bazaar and Paschim Vihar.

ORIENTATION

The main commercial institutions are located around Connaught Place, and between Connaught Place and the diplomatic quarter of Chanakyapuri. Further south lie the more exclusive residential districts of south Delhi. The parliament building and presidential palace are also located to the south of Connaught Place. Old Delhi is to the north of Connaught Place. Gurgaon (Haryana state) and Noida (Uttar Pradesh state), which are parts of the National Capital Region, also house several business establishments. Large parts of the city – especially in Old Delhi – do not have street signs.
