Schuyler S. Carter is a native of Muskogee and Summit, Oklahoma. She holds a Master's degree in urban planning from the illustrious Alabama A&M University. She is currently a second-year student pursuing a Ph.D. in Urban and Regional Science at Texas A&M University. Her major research interests include but are not limited to: Black Placemaking, Black indigeneity and Afro-Native American culture, grassroots archive management, African American museum curation and advocacy. She has been acknowledged on multiple occasions for her ongoing preservation projects in Oklahoma related to historically black communities.

Prior to entering into her doctoral program, Schuyler has dedicated a significant amount of time researching her family history and was able to successfully nominate her great grandfather, Rev. L.W. Thomas' home in Summit, Oklahoma to be listed on the National Register of Historic Places. In effort to expand the narrative of what it means to be Black in America, Schuyler established the online Millennial Archivist platform. This platform is aimed at acknowledging the diversity in African American heritage as well as encouraging younger generations to take interest in researching their own histories to see how they impact their own lives and to be inspired by the Black Excellence that exudes from their own community.
