The Baylor Louise Herrington School of Nursing (LHSON) and the Office of the Vice Provost at Baylor University will hold a series of grant writing workshops presented by the Research Development office. These comprehensive grant writing workshops are specifically for nursing and will be presented virtually in four parts, 1.5 hours each, over 4 weeks. Each session is designed specifically for LHSON faculty to explain the process of writing a competitive grant proposal. The workshop will include lectures, activities, and homework exercises that are aimed to help you develop your first (or next) grant. The workshops cover the fundamentals of proposal writing—concepts backed up with concrete tips and operational strategies —while also providing tools for planning and longer-term sustainability. Most importantly, these workshops help you understand the people and tools available to help you write and submit grants. There will be recordings available after the event.

Workshop 1 (May 4): Learn why nursing faculty can benefit from writing grants, the kinds of grants available, the Baylor process for writing and submitting grants, and who to go to for help. Activity: create a funding goals chart and choose a project you would like to fund.

Workshop 2 (May 11): Learn how you can find grants to fund your particular field and how to use the Baylor tools for finding funding. Activity: sign up for funding alerts and create a personal list of funders for your research.

Workshop 3 (May 18): Learn the steps of writing a grant, the faculty responsibilities, and how to determine if your idea fits that grant solicitation. Learn about the review process and tips for writing a competitive proposal. Activity: prepare a one-pager of your project idea that you could use in talking to a colleague or a representative from a funder.

Workshop 4 (May 25): Learn about the resources Baylor's Research Development has created (Grant Toolkits, Guides, Templates, and Letters) to make your grant writing process smoother and easier. Understand how to access and use these resources for your grant proposal. Learn activities that can help you establish leadership in your field. Activity: plan your grant writing strategy and download Grant Tools appropriate for your discipline.

At the conclusion of this seminar series, faculty should come away with a broader understanding of the grant planning, writing, and review process, the ability to make less arbitrary and more informed writing decisions, and an understanding of the network of research support at their universities.

These grant writing workshops are intended for all faculty members, from novice to expert (tenure track, tenured, and clinical track). Everyone attending should have their camera on for interaction and participation.
