Graduate Students

Graduate students may participate in Baylor University student organizations as long as the organization’s constitution and/or by-laws do not prevent graduate student membership. Graduate students wishing to join an organization must be full-time students in good academic standing as defined by the Graduate School. A graduate student may participate as either a student member of a student organization or as a secondary advisor (if he/she serves as a graduate apprentice/assistant and satisfies advisor requirements). No graduate student may serve as both an advisor and member in any student organization.
