

Assistant Professor in Curriculum & Instruction (Tenure Track)

SCHOOL: Baylor's School of Education celebrated its 100th anniversary in 2019. With over 60 full-time faculty members, the school's growing research portfolio complements its long-standing commitment to excellence in teaching and student mentoring. The school boasts a variety of academic program options across its three departments: Curriculum and Instruction, Educational Leadership, and Educational Psychology. Baylor's award-winning undergraduate program in teacher education serves approximately 350 students and has earned national distinction for innovative partnerships with local schools that provide future teachers with extensive clinical preparation. More than 700 graduate students pursue advanced study and professional preparation in master's, EdS, EdD, and PhD programs. With multiple faculty searches underway and exciting new academic initiatives both at home and abroad, the school is in a period of significant expansion and is poised for greater impact through the production of meaningful, high-quality research and the preparation of outstanding leaders, teachers, and clinicians.
